

MARSHALL UNIVERSITY®
Joan C. Edwards School of Medicine

Summer Academy

A hands-on residential academy at the Marshall University Joan C. Edwards School of Medicine for undergraduate students who are currently enrolled in a West Virginia public or private accredited college or university who aspire to become physicians.

Monday, June 8 – Friday, June 12, 2020

Join other undergraduate students for an exciting week. You will learn

- Interviewing skills and how to maximize study skills
- Tips from experts on the Admissions process

In addition, you may

- Participate in hands-on exercises in clinical skills
- Manage wound care and build splints in a “wilderness” environment
- Interact with medical students, physician residents and faculty

The academy is free to students who are selected

Eligibility requirements

- West Virginia residents and out of state students who are currently enrolled in a West Virginia public or private accredited college or university
- Students who are in good academic standing and have passed a minimum of 30 earned college hours.
- Strongly prefer a minimum 3.00 GPA and 22 on ACT or SAT equivalent (Critical Reading and Math)
- Demonstrated serious interest in a medical career

Women, minorities and those who are from underrepresented groups in medicine are encouraged to apply.
